Sibshop Training Coming Soon!

Sibshops are celebrations of the many contributions made by siblings of children with special needs. Sibshops acknowledge that being the sibling of a person with special needs is for some a good thing, for others a not-so-good thing, and for many, somewhere in between. They reflect a belief that siblings have much to offer one another – if they are given a chance. Sibshops are an opportunity to participate in a spirited mix of new games, new friends, and discussion activities.

If you would like to learn more and/or become a certified Sibshops facilitator, join us on August 15th and 16th in Okemos. After the training, grant applications will be available from the Family Center to individuals who are interested in running a Sibshops in their area.

For more information or to be notified when registration opens, contact the Family Phone Line at 800-359-3722.

A newsletter for families of children and youth with special health care needs, and the professionals who care for them. Connecting you with information and news you can use.

SCDAA Inc. Speaks About Gene Therapy Approval

On Dec. 8, 2023, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approved two cell-based gene therapies for sickle cell disease (SCD), Casgevy from CRISPR/Vertex and Lyfgenia from Bluebird Bio. These are the first treatments of their kind available to individuals with SCD in the United States.

The Sickle Cell Disease Association of America Inc. welcomed the approval of these potentially curative therapies which mark major advances in the treatment of sickle cell disease; however, there are valid concerns about accessibility and the potential for adverse effects. In a statement issued by Dr. Lewis Hsu, chief medical officer of the SCDAA, he said:

“We at the Sickle Cell Disease Association of America Inc. celebrate that two gene therapies are approved for sickle cell disease by the FDA today, Dec. 8. This double milestone was a long time coming, and sickle cell disease now joins the ranks of other genetic diseases with gene therapy treatments. These two gene therapies mark a big step forward for sickle cell disease research and treatment.”

Camp and Conference Scholarships Available

Did you know that the Family Center for Children and Youth with Special Health Care Needs at Children’s Special Health Care Services offers both Camp and Conference Scholarships?

These programs are just one of the many ways the Family Center provides supports to families. These programs are available to families regardless of enrollment in Children’s Special Health Care Services. Specific eligibility criteria must still be met.

Camp Scholarships applications are available starting in February and are accepted as long as funding is available. The Family Center is still accepting applications at this time. Conference scholarships are available year round, and can be used to help a parent and youth attend a conference related to the child’s diagnosis or disability.

More information, eligibility criteria, and applications are available at: The Family Center for Children and Youth with Special Health Care Needs \(Family Center\) \(michigan.gov\)

Preschool Learning Resources from Build Up MI

When many preschools closed because of the pandemic, hundreds of thousands of Michigan children didn't have access to the vital resources they needed to meet important developmental milestones.

That's why early childhood educators from across Michigan created Thrive From Home, a statewide program to help parents and caregivers support their 3- to 5-year-olds with at-home activities and resources.

Families are encouraged to watch videos on Build Up Michigan's website and then practice activities with their preschooler at home using household items. There are a wide range of skill-building activities that take only a few minutes a day.

If parents are concerned about their child's development, they can find additional information on Build Up's website and contact a local Child

Find coordinator to request an evaluation.

Children who are not meeting developmental milestones or are struggling to learn may need additional supports through local districts to help them prepare for kindergarten.

Intervening as early as possible helps to develop skills to strengthen the child's foundation for future learning. The videos and other skill building resources are available at: Thrive From Home Resources | Build Up Michigan

New Issue Brief on Paying Family Caregivers

Paying family caregivers for services covered by Medicaid for home- and community-based services has risen in popularity over the past several years. This is due to a shortage of providers and increased utilization during the COVID-19 public health emergency.

While many families and individuals may want this option, not all states have authorized it. Although there are some Medicaid restrictions, paying family caregivers is possible for many home- and community-based services.

This issue brief from the National Health Law Program discusses the Medicaid options for paying family caregivers. It covers some of the policy considerations that can help protect individual choice, support caregivers, and overall increase the availability of support.

This April, ten of our current members met in Okemos for our annual in-person meeting. They spent two days together learning about parent leadership, developing a vision statement for the group, and doing strategic planning for moving forward.

While the purpose of our annual meeting is to work together and plan for the upcoming year, the time spent together was also an opportunity to get to know the other members, build relationships, and share their experiences.

If you are interested in applying for an open position, more information is included in the Family Leadership Network application packet available on the MI F2F website at:

New Transition Website For Youth With IDD

According to the National Survey of Children's Health (data from 2020/2021), 7% of youth aged 12-17 have intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD). Eventually, they will need to transition from pediatric to adult health care services. But only 14% of youth with IDD received health care transition preparation and guidance from their doctor. Teens and young adults with IDD can make this transition smooth with support from their health care providers, families, and supporters.

The Center for Transition to Adult Health Care for Youth with Disabilities, a national center funded by the Administration for Community Living (ACL), is launching a new website to help young people and their families take the lead in health care transition.

The accessible site was developed for and by youth with intellectual and developmental disabilities. The site features tools and resources for youth and their families, as well as resources for health care professionals who are supporting these families through health care transition.

Supported Decision-Making Toolkit Available

People with disabilities and their families often ask, "What will happen to me when I am older or, to my son or daughter when I am gone?" As young people approach adulthood, families often question whether to pursue guardianship.

These conversations are made more difficult by lack of information and tools people can use to support loved ones.

Members of the Supported Decision-Making Coalition created a resource designed for all people, that recognizes their uniqueness and individuality and helps them, their families, and those who support them, throughout their lifespan to make decisions.

This toolkit is for all people, including people with multiple disabilities, intellectual disabilities, developmental disabilities, mental health disabilities, physical disabilities, substance use disorders, and aging adults.

The toolkit is available at Supported Decision-Making Toolkit \(michigan.gov\))
